Organic Growers School

Providing Organic Education Since 1993

Help us create a thriving, organic food community!

Please contribute to OGS today...

Hello Friends,

The Spring fundraising drive is underway!

Please support our mission to inspire, educate, and support people to live, farm, and garden organically, which will help end our over-reliance on industrialized food systems and create a region of inspired, knowledgeable, and confident growers.

Don't forget to send in your donation, you can do this directly online, HERE, or by mailing in the envelope you may have received in the mail.

We're expanding our programs to further support the creation of a thriving, organic food community in our region

We can't do this without your support!

With your help we can create a thriving, local, organic, food community!

In gratitude,

The OGS Team

ASK TOM: Strawberry Harvest Aids

Dear Tom,

Strawberry season is good for cash flow but hard on our backs. Do you have any ideas to help with our picking efficiency and sore backs?

Lou in Barnardsville

Lou,

We grow several types of fruit but no strawberries so far. We do lots of transplanting which raises similar problems. When we started years ago, Karen and I were the entire workforce so transplanting often took hours. I found I was speedy for about an hour, then my efficiency dropped off over the next several hours as sore muscles made themselves known...
